Prohibited Acts of Academic Misconduct

3. Program Handbook and Course Classroom Violations

Students enrolled in courses offered within the College's various areas of study are provided standards of classroom conduct within the course syllabus at the discretion of the course instructor. Additionally, students enrolled in a selective admissions program are provided a program handbook(s) that sets forth rules and regulations that detail a student's responsibilities and conduct within the program. In both instances, the standards of conduct are specifically related to and intended to insure compliance with the academic requirements and goals of the course or program. Students must adhere to these conduct guidelines as well as those outlined in the VC Student Handbook Code of Conduct. Students engaged and found guilty of violating course or program specific rules and regulations may be subject to academic misconduct sanctions. To the extent an act of misconduct identified in a course syllabus or selective admissions program handbook is identical to an act of misconduct identified within the College's non-academic misconduct policy, the act of misconduct will be treated as a non-academic act of misconduct.
